EASY COME, EASY GO

The extra money which appears to be in circulation as the result of improved business and industrial conditions has found its reflection in the Pari-Mutuel gambling at the race meets and agricultural fairs. Up to Thursday the Pari-Mutuel wagers had reached the impressive total of $1,124,840, or an increase of nearly $300,000 over last year's receipts when the boom times were just beginning to have an appreciable effect. The total accruing to the fairs at that time was $603,091.

ORDERS TO SHOOT

Shoot first and argue afterwards. That seems to have been the nub of President Roosevelt's broadcast Thursday night with the whole world listening in. Or rather that part of the whole world which is permitted to listen. The President told his many millions of listeners that he had ordered the Navy to shoot first when Axis submarines, surface raiders or aircraft are encountered in areas which this country considers vital to its defense. The President also said the Navy would protect not only American ships but "ships of all flags" from attack when sailing "in our defensive waters." It had been broadly announced that the broadcast would answer all questions, but the President's words were hardly spoken before the world began to speculate whether the declaration foretold a convoy system for the areas indicated. The broadcast was received by the American people with mingled emotions in which political partnership found no play. The almost universal comment was: "It means war," but so did almost everything that has been done in recent months. If war is necessary to the protection of our interests as a democracy—and to our individual interests—"let 'er come," as the man in the street expresses it. We fully agree with the Chief Executive when he says: "We have not sought a shooting war with Hitler, but neither do we want peace so much that we are willing to pay for it by permitting him to attack our naval and merchant ships while they are on legitimate business."

A FORTHRIGHT ANALYSIS

(Herald Tribune)

The program for control of inflation outlined by Secretary Morgenthau in Boston Tuesday was an unusually effective presentation of the problem. The Secretary to the Treasury pulled no punches.

"It is sheer folly for labor leaders to seek new increases in wages every few months," said Mr. Morgenthau—"new increases which in turn produce higher manufacturing costs, higher prices and a higher cost of living." But he was even more outspoken and more specific with reference to farm prices and to the artificial scarcity which has been responsible for raising them to their present levels. "I wonder," said he, "if the housewife knows, when she pays 15 percent more than she did a year ago for a bag of flour that our supply of wheat is the largest on record, and that 488,000,000 bushels of several years' crops are available in our neighbor democracy of Canada."

Secretary Morgenthau's chief contribution to the discussion, aside from the fact that he lifted it for the first time out of the arena of politics, was his emphasis on the supply side of the picture. We must cut down effective demand, he said, by increasing taxes, by encouraging a wider investment in defense savings bonds and stamps, by extending the controls over bank credits and capital expenditure, and by further reducing non-defense expenditures by the Federal, State and local governments. "But," said he, "we must also attack the problem from the opposite direction. We must make every effort to increase the supply of goods available to the consumer wherever this can be done without encroaching upon the defense program."

Mr. Morgenthau left no doubt that he regarded the farm-situation as a glaring example of the failure thus far to meet the threat of inflation through releasing available supplies. The government now holds or controls 7,000,000 bales of cotton, he pointed out, yet cotton has been permitted virtually to double in price since the outbreak of the war in August, 1939. On top of this Congress recently sent to the President a proposal to hold this government cotton off the market for the duration of the emergency. Millions of people are going without the milk, butter and eggs which are necessary to good health and good morale, he observed, yet the reserve stocks of butter, cheese, beef and pork held in this country are higher than they were a year ago and higher for the average for five years.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Morgenthau's address marks the end of the Administration's policy of pussyfooting with respect to the part played in the inflation problem by unjustified wage increases, on the one hand, and artificial scarcities on the other.

MORNING'S NEWS IN A NUTSHELL

Torpedoing of the 1700-ton American-owned freighter Montana off the coast of Greenland was reported to the government yesterday, less than 24 hours after President Roosevelt ordered German and Italian war raiders sunk on sight if they ventured into American defensive waters.

High officials indicate that Axis warships are in peril of attack by the United States Navy in any quarter, of the seven seas to which they may extend their depredations. They made it plain that no exact line will be drawn on any chart to help Adolf Hitler decide where his submarines may operate with impunity.

American aid to Russia will be full and quick and will continue until Hitler is crushed—this was the word that came from a conference yesterday between President Roosevelt and his newly-appointed supply mission to Moscow.

The Russians, while claiming to have the better of it generally all along the eastern front, acknowledged early today their withdrawal from Chernigov, 80 miles northeast of Kiev along the lower central front.

Former Thomaston Boy Built a Lumber Town and Manages the Industry

Alton Morse

—By Staff Photographer.

The Courier-Gazette had an interesting caller yesterday in the person of Alton Morse—31 years ago a graduate of Thomaston High School, today a captain of industry in the lumber town which he built in the Province of Ontario, called Sultan. His annual schedule calls for a visit to his old home in Thomaston, but he came at this particular time to accompany his brother, Harry, who is slowly recovering from an ill turn experienced while his guest in Canada.

In the Fall of 1910 Alton Morse entered the employ of the General Electric Company in Lynn. From there he came back to Portland for a business course; thence to Pittsfield, Me., as secretary of the promoter of an Idaho gold mine.

His next move—and one which brought him to within a few miles of the town which has become his permanent home—was to Chapeau, Ontario, where he became secretary to the superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Fall of 1914 found him in the employ of the Devon Lumber Company at Devon, near Chapeau. He went to the latter town in 1920 as operating manager for the Austin & Nicholson Lumber Company, and eight years later was commissioned to build the lumber town at Sultan, and became general manager of the McNaughton Lumber Company. This was reorganized after the depression of 1929, as the Wakimi Lumber Company, of which Mr. Morse became the vice president and general manager.

This concern has an output of 12,000,000 feet of white pine a year, its chief market being Great Britain. The thought of shipping difficulties in these crucial times inspired the question as to whether any cargo had ever been lost. The answer was in the negative.

Boats are assigned to the company from time to time, and the cargoes must be ready for them at Montreal.

The company also supplies mining timbers for the International Nickel Corp., at Sudbury, where 90 percent of the world's supply of that material is produced.

The Wakimi Company employs about 350 men on the average, mostly of French descent.

Getting out of Canada these days is not an easy matter for residents of that country—meaning that it is not easy to get out with cash. Mr.

Morse, with an invalid on his hands, was permitted only $25, and given only 15 days in which to remain in this country. The $25 was American money, obtained from the bank, and certain forms to be signed before it was delivered. Travelers coming out of Canada are not supposed to bring Canadian money, but as a matter of fact Mr. Morse had some of that currency.

Business is booming in Canada, according to Mr. Morse, but taxes are so high that the wage-earner has only about enough left to live on.

Mr. Morse is married and has a 19-year-old son, Wesley, about to enter the University of Toronto, and who has never quite reached the point where he could beat his daddy at tennis. Other sports which Alton Morse follows include golf and fishing. Big game is so plentiful—moose, deer, bears and caribou—that there is little zest in the pursuit of it. Partridges are very numerous and very tame.

Mr. Morse plans to leave for home next Monday.

Book Review

(By K. S. F.)

Sonnets and Lyrics, by Winthrop Palmer. Palmyra Publishing House, Portland.

With so many pens turned to poetry, the fact that one is arrested with pleasure in reading the poetic outpourings of this artistic and graceful writer, means that she holds a sure and high quality of thought, with smooth intelligence and grace and mature understanding in her finished technique. Thus—The afternoon of Summer in September. Flowers were mauve the leaves were holding stiff. I who still love you only can remember How small the pond, how insignificant the stuff. How scarce the wind, it never filled the sail. How short the course—not more than there and back. Yet all my life's been fishing for a while. Or picking rainy asters and hardback.

Summer Yesterdays in Maine, by Willard L. Sperry; published by Harper and Brothers, New York; with pencil drawings by the late Charles H. Woodbury.

This delightful combination of a totally unsophisticated boyhood and charmingly sage retrospection that Dean Sperry of Harvard writes, is chiefly centered in the period of 1885 to 1900, but like the fruit puddings of our Christmas holidays it is stuffed with the rich fruits and spices of wisdom that come to such brilliant minds through the years.

This book will become one of our classics. Its reflections give insight into his fineness of character. He mirrors our progress thus: "It is as though one had seen kingdoms rise and wane, of such is the stuff of progress, the passing of a period." This reflection comes from the abandonment of the trolley cars then the old steam cars down to York Beach and then the toots of motor buses and motor cars on U. S. Route No. 1.

Dean Sperry, the son of a minister of the Congregational Church with small salary who gave much to his growing family besides spiritual foundations and a father's excellent guidance. He gave to them visions and high qualities of thought that has taken the Dean to this honored position and love of thousands at Harvard.

There is so much of historical interest that is mingled with this inside-the-cup. He tasted the salt of the sea in relation to life; he gives you the pulsing thoughts of that period in our national progress with the flavor of old wine in his reflections. This book has come at a time when love should mingle with pride in the strength of purpose that followed these brave embryo years of our development into a great nation. This is a forthright story of life of a period of progress that should live.

MAJOR CORWIN OLDS' LETTERS

Pastor of Congregational Church a Busy Man Down South—Describes a "Poor White's" Home

Major Corwin Olds, pastor of the Congregational Church, now on leave serving with the U. S. Forces on their maneuvers in Louisiana, writes such interesting letters daily to his family that many of his friends have asked to have them published.

Sunday Evening, Sept. 7

My Dear Family: Here I am again with another chance to write. We have been traveling so far and so fast I haven't had much time to sit down anywhere but in my station wagon—and the roads have been too rough to write while riding.

It is 8 p. m. and pitch dark, as the moon is not yet risen; but as I wrote those words I looked to the east, and there it was, just the top edge of a big red ball peeking through the trees at me. Seems as though that moon and you be long together. Remember all the different places we have camped together and watched that moon?

A burst of rifle fire a mile or so to the southeast tells us that the enemy is not far away and evidently has just been contacted by our infantry after a Sunday's rest. Our regiment was alerted at 6 p. m. and some of the units have already rolled out, but I have decided to stay right here all night as I have to be in Alexandria early in the morning. Besides Corning and I have traveled so far and so fast the last two or three days, we need a good night's sleep. Now if we only had our little bug-proof, snake-proof tent here the night would be complete! Right beside my candle just now I have half a watermelon out of which I dig rich bites of red heart meat every few minutes—and the other half sits on a stump close by! I know you like watermelon and I picked this nice ripe one in a field today.

The Courier-Gazette arrived today. It's always so good to have that touch from home. I took an hour this afternoon to go with some of the other officers hunting arrow-heads. It was awfully hot, but I wanted to find one for each of the boys and did succeed in finding two. I am also going to send Jim a chunk of the flint from which they made arrowheads so he can use it for his fire-making in the Scouts. If you want to keep these for souvenirs you can remember that they were picked up away in the Louisiana woods.

Friday we were in action about 40 miles from the nice-parklike place where we stayed the night before. I took the mail forward to the men in the afternoon, and just found the last Battery at 6 p. m. as they received the marching order to move. Then I tried to locate Regimental again, only to find they had been captured, including Co. Choate and Col. Whitney. I found "E" battery, and discovered they were surrounded. After waiting until 10 p. m. I decided to try and run the enemy lines as I wanted an early start for a long trip the next morning. We were promptly captured but I soon talked them into letting us go, and we got through. Then I found out that a strong armored force of enemy had located in the vicinity of Major Dismore's "rear echelon" 40 miles back where we had stayed the night before, so I decided to run back in there and warn him. Left there about 12:30 p. m. and ran 56 miles southeast to the vicinity of Alexandria, where at 2:30 a. m. we finally crawled under a tree with the 116th P. A., 31st Div.

They were alerted at 5 a. m. so I got up and got a gail of water and took a bath while I gave Corning an extra hour's sleep. At 7 we started for Lake Charles, a little over 100 miles from where we were. Had to be there at 10 a. m., and made it by 9:30, just 2½ hours.

Wherever I go now I carry everything along, so we can stop wherever we have to and be completely equipped. It was a meeting of all the Chaplains of the third Army, the largest meeting of Chaplains on active duty ever held. Gen. Kreuger, commanding Officer of the Third Army spoke to us. The program was scheduled to continue until 6 p. m. then we had to go back 120 miles and find our troops who might have moved a dozen times and be anywhere within a 20-mile radius of where they had been. I had $500 worth of money orders to get for some of the men so I had to hurry to get them and do some shopping in Alexandria.

Then we tried to find the regiment. After exploring woods trails until the trails petered out to nothing and then going to look somewhere else, we finally found the regiment after midnight. Then since it was Saturday night I wanted to find the nearest infantry regiment and arrange for Mass for the Catholic boys, so we hunted some more and finally found the 103d about three miles away. After finding the time and place of the Mass, I went back and told Corning to go to bed while I wrote out a field message giving the information for both Protestant and Catholic services, took it to our message center and gave instructions to send it to all Batteries.

Then I walked up the trail to my bed, tired but feeling as though I had done a full day's work. I am old and seasoned, but sometimes I wonder how these young lads like my orderly Corning stands the pace I make him travel. But he does it eagerly and is very interested. This morning up at 6 and at 9 discovered that the message had not gotten out to the men! I hadn't even had time to write anything on my sermon, although I had been turning it over in mind. Our attendance at church was good and the setting quite pretty. I used a big black pipe stump for an altar, with the gold Cross and Candelsticks setting on it in the shade of three scrub oaks. The band was there for music, and the men sat or stood around in the shade of the oaks. During the responsive reading one man was stung by a scorpion, and one was bitten by a centipede, so we lost two from the congregation but we carried on just the same.

The rest of the day has been given to visiting the regiment, stretched out about four miles, and tonight I am again tired.

Among items of interest, we have seen within the past few days: darkies picking cotton, just as in pictures; thousands of acres of rice fields down toward Lake Charles, some of it green and some of it in the stock and some just being harvested. At Lake Charles we "drove directly to the meeting" so I had no chance to write you from there. The meeting was in the auditorium of a large High School. As I sat there, I noticed a picture of George Washington. Then I looked to the other side only to discover not Abraham Lincoln's picture, but Robert E. Lee's. It reminded me again that I am in the South. I suppose that is the general practice in the schools down here.

Friday morning I got a chance to do what I had long been hoping to do get inside one of these very poor white homes. It was just as you see pictured, almost like "To-bacco Road," but surprised me in one way. It was clean as any place I ever saw. The children were clean, their clothes spotless, a 15-year old girl sitting on the porch smoking cigarettes was dressed as cleanly and looked fresh as a town school girl.

I wanted to see the inside of one of the mud fireplaces they all seem to use out here in the woods. It was a picture: no andirons, a small smoky fire burning, two old fashioned flat-irons sitting on their heels in front of the flame getting hot. I tried to get a color slide of it. One big main room where the fireplace was, with two double beds side by side. Must have been very cordial, but went into the big room when I got on the porch, and out into the kitchen when I went into the big room. I was glad of it once when her husband arrived unexpectedly and I didn't know what these southern woodsmen might think about strangers in their houses. But he just asked her a couple of questions and paid no attention to me and went out.

The children all go to school and were very mannerly. The consolidated school is a great thing for children from such homes. Although I could look through the roof, the walls, and the floor, everything had been scrubbed until it shone and the whole yard—mostly dirt—had been swept with a broom. I'd like to have had a series of pictures on it, but a tall picket fence too close to the house prevented.

Now it is late and I guess I must go to bed for we should get an early start in the morning. I have to go to Alexandria to see Col. Silliman, then to Livingston Hospital, back to the train in Alexandria when Col. Silliman leaves for Fort Sill, then back to Livingston again. In the evening another meeting in Alexandria, then come out in the woods again and try to find the regiment. Looks like another busy day and night. Keep on like a "soldier's wife" and when

BARRED FROM THE RING

State Boxing Commission Took a Hand At the Arena Last Night

The main bout at the Park Street Arena last night was not fought as scheduled, due to an injury that Jackie Fisher had sustained to his back the day before. However, he made the trip to Rockland and was willing to fight. The boxing commission requested an examination, which was given by a local doctor, who refused to let him enter the ring.

Stan Siviski of Waterville was matched with Jackie Ledger for the 10-round go. Ledger had jacked his price twice on Mac, the last time, the night before the fight and had demanded his money before he entered the ring. He got what he asked for and then took a dive in the second in a kayo that didn't even convince the candy boy. A few minutes later, he got what he hadn't asked for and hadn't expected, the Maine State Boxing Commission, represented by Chairman Rock Youngs of Bangor, barred him from ever fighting in a Maine ring again.

The commission is tightening up on all boxers who must play square or get out. Mr. Youngs announced that they had also barred Tommy Regan, who showed up here two weeks ago unable to fight.

Eddie Briery won a decision over Kid Norman in the semi-final in a good fast bout that the crowd approved of.

Pancho Villa, a sad commentary on the Pancho of old, had heavy weather under the Brown Bomber's fists and lost the decision. Villa had substituted for Sylvio Dennis who went overweight.

Kid Hudson supplanted Whopper Martin in the first preliminary against Eddie Smith and shellacked the colored boy unmercifully, having him down twice in the second and then knocking him out.

CITIZEN'S COMMITTEE ON NONDEFENSE SPENDING

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Henry M. Wriston, president of Brown University, has announced the formation of a nationwide citizen committee to work for a reduction of non-essential and non-defense expenditures of Federal, state and local governments. The committee will be known as the Citizens Emergency Committee on Non-defense Expenditures and will work under the chairmanship of Dr. Wriston. Headquarters will be opened in Washington in the near future.

It is the objective of the group to obtain representation of all the elements in American life—particularly the lower income groups. Residents of all 48 states will eventually be included on the Committee which already has among its members citizens from 32 states. Applications for enrollment to come in from people in all parts of the country and from all walks of life. Among those now representative of national organizations are Louis J. Taggart, president, National Grange, Columbus; Mark S. Matthews, retiring president, United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, and F. H. Stinchfield, former president, American Bar Association, Minneapolis.

"The American people," Dr. Wriston said, "through their government are requiring of themselves tremendous sacrifices. Direct taxes on all groups will increase many fold and excise taxes will carry the burden and sacrifice to every single wage earner, to every family unit. Despite the emergency; despite immediate defense needs; despite the sacrifices which have been asked of the people, non-defense appropriations of the Federal Government were increased almost $90,000,000 over last year."

Dr. Wriston declared that such and expense that taxpayers should be willing to hand out their part to keep at best condition. There is greater tendency today to build smaller houses, less stately, but far more convenient, and with almost always glassed in piazzas that call for well kept street conditions, if pleasure is to be taken with the seeing eyes. All this has helped the city fathers to sustain better and better street conditions that all thinkers appreciate.

COFFIN IN EGYPT. GEN. 50; 26
[For The Courier-Gazette]

He was put in a coffin in Egypt
Embalmed to prevent death's decay
Good Joseph the savior of Israel
A man whom we honor today.
His bones long preserved in that casket

Though dead were yet speaking out
A message of hope, inspiration
In times of oppression severe.
For Israel knew in their slavery
Some day they would find a release
And they would enter their great
In a country of freedom and peace
The influence of all who are noble
Abides in the hearts left behind
Like the coffin of Joseph in Egypt

Let us cherish our coffin in Egypt
In all our oppression and strife,
The memory of loved ones departed
Our rich inspiration through life.

CARILLONS

This writer knows a man who for years has had the secret ambition of establishing a set of carillons in Rockland, but fortune did not

Many churches throughout the country have sets of chimes and how lovely they are at eventime or early morn ringing out their melodies in hymns or in favorite songs on other days. Of course a set of chimes and the term carillon are sometimes thought to be much the same, but they are not anything alike in points of playing or ringing, and, as Hugh Gibson has said, from Belgium come the best of the gifted carillonners and their compositions and arrangements. A chimie or peal of bells covers an octave, whereas a carillon is usually

"We plan for next year a different sort of information service consisting of a monthly letter in which we will try to keep you informed of new research findings, marketing news, and developments in the 'eggs for defense' program. Later on you will be sent more information about this new service. Meantime, would you help us by filling in the enclosed card."

We In Vinalhaven

"We" met last Friday evening with Mary Arnold after having postponed our meeting that she and Mr. Holmes might be with us when the committee on the Social Survey made its report. "We" have decided the island of Vinalhaven into seven districts and our members are going ahead with a survey designed to reveal exactly how many people there are on the island of Vinalhaven—exactly how many working adults, after those children of pre-school, school, and high school age, and the aged have been ascertained. "We" hope to be able to impress upon the community the importance of the lobster fisherman in our economic life.

The Vinalhaven Credit Society has opened a savings account in the local bank and "We" are circulating pledges designed to build up the membership of our savings society.

Much interest in Knitting Co-operatives has been stimulated lately among that group of women who in the past have done this work in their homes. Although the Wage-Hour Law has put an end to this work, Mr. Shannon Wage-Hour Law commissioner in Portland is meeting with us on Tuesday to acquaint us with the exact nature of the law and how co-operative knitting groups can function without violating that law. "We" extend a cordial invitation to any woman interested in this kind of work to meet with us next week.

"We" meet again on Tuesday evening with Mary Arnold, firmly believing that an informal discussion of our mutual problems clarifies our understanding of them knowing that by some concerted action a solution of them will be found.

Our slogan: "The work of each for the weal of all."

OUTGROWTH OF A ROMANCE

Interesting Story of the Lillius Gilchrist Grace Institute At Tenant's Harbor

The buildings of the Lillius Gilchrist Grace Institute in Tenant's Harbor. The house in the foreground accommodates the Home Economics department, while the second building, in the nearest end, houses the Community Rooms, with the rest of the building being devoted to the Manual Arts department. The Metal Arts department is located in the third building.

Because of a romance between a young Irish immigrant and the pretty daughter of a Yankee sailing master in far off Callao, Peru over three-quarters of a century ago the community of Tenant's Harbor is today favored with the Lillius Gilchrist Grace Institute which for the last six years has been teaching home economics to the girls of the town and for the past two years maintaining a manual arts and metal arts course for the boys, all free of cost to the town or the pupils.

To go back to the beginning of the chain of events which lead up to this splendid school one has to go to Tenant's Harbor in 1857 when Lillius Gilchrist, 18 year-old daughter of bluff old Capt. George Gilchrist, accompanied her father on a voyage to Callao, Peru aboard his "round the Horn" sailing ship on a trading trip. The trip took many months and included working the ship around Cape Horn and up the West coast of South America to Callao where Capt. Gilchrist traded with the firm of Bryce & Company, importers and exporters dealing with the Yankee skippers who roamed the seas on trading trips in the heyday of sail.

Working for the Bryce Company was a young Irish lad who had immigrated to New York from his native Ireland at the age of 14, working his way aboard a sailing vessel and landed on the pier, penniless, but in what he believed was the land of opportunity. Progress did not come fast enough for the energetic boy who worked as a construction laborer in New York in the tropics. The captain had told of his native home nestled on the shores of the broad Atlantic in the little village of Tenant's Harbor, Maine and his family which included his beautiful daughter Lillius, who had the deep rooted love of the sea and tall ships that she had inherited from a long line of sailors on both sides of the family.

Once the ship docked, the captain brought Lillius ashore with the two became fast friends and soon were in love with one another. Marriage was out of the question at that time. Stiff backed Yankee tradition forbade a girl marrying in a heathen port away from her home, and the young clerk, although a shareholder in the business, was not as yet well enough off financially to support a wife.

The tall ship slipped over the horizon one morning headed for the Eastern coast of the United States laden with goods bought in Callao. Aboard was Lillius Gilchrist with the immigrant boy's promise still ringing in her ears that he would come to Tenant's Harbor for her when he had accumulated enough to properly support her.

Two years slipped by. Corresponding had been out of the question as the round trip to Callao sometimes took that long and there was no mail service except when a friendly captain might carry a letter as a personal favor to a friend.

One evening the stage brought a stranger who had traveled overland from New York where he had landed from a sailing vessel from South America. He inquired for the Gilchrist home and was soon reunited with the girl. Now the principal owner of the company in which he had started as a clerk, he had come to marry Lillius Gilchrist, the girl who had waited for him, strong in her belief that he would some day come for her as he had promised.

A few weeks later they were married in the Gilchrist home amid the people of the town who knew and loved the bride and had come in the short time that he had been with them, to have a deep respect for the Irish boy who was to take her away to a heathen port in South America.

The marriage was to make history in American commerce and be the bedrock of a great maritime dynasty that exists even today, nearly a century after its foundation.

The Bryce & Company firm soon became known as the W. R. Grace Company which was founded in 1865. The executive ability of young William Grace was felt in South American trade as his holdings gradually became larger and his company earned an enviable reputation for fair trading. In 1891, he formed the New York and Pacific Steamship Company to run to South American ports and that company is today the Grace Steamship Company.

Aided by his wife, with her inherent trading ability, he built an empire of commerce such as never had been seen in South American trade, and even in his busy life found time to serve a term as Mayor of New York where they made their home.

York and he shipped aboard a clipper ship for South America as a seaman. In Callao, he obtained work with the Bryce Company and when Captain Gilchrist's ship docked at the company wharf he was the chief clerk of the firm and a small shareholder in the growing business.

Capt. Gilchrist, after the manner of sailing masters of those days was a rugged individual and his word was law and gospel aboard his craft. He was known in the trading ports for his sharp Yankee wit and close bargaining, and was welcomed by the firms which always received a fair price for their wares and not a cent more, and were able to buy his stock at a good price, but not a cent less than the captains legitimate profit.

On previous trips to Callao, the captain had been impressed with the keen mind and trading ability of young William Grace, chief clerk of the firm and one in whom the Yankee skipper found his match as a skillful trader. A fast friendship formed between the two, one a rough and ready salt water sailor and the boy who had come halfway round the world from the poorer section of his native Queenstown to meet in a tiny

MARJORIE MILLS BROADCAST

Monday through Friday at 1.30 P. M., over Stations WNAC, Boston; WTAG, Worcester; WCSH, Portland; WICC, Bridgeport; WTIC, Hartford; WEAN, Providence; WLBZ, Bangor.

Every year the same questions tumble into the mail basket about pickling, every year we repeat the same warning and exhortations to the pickling sisterhood. So if none of these questions bother you and if you observe all these precautions . . . fine. You doubtless have crisp delectable pickles and you can sit back complacently while we deal with the queries.

The warnings and exhortations first. Insist on clear high grade vinegar; if you use inferior, harsh vinegars, you'll have soft pickles and they'll be poor in flavor. Chuck out last year's pickling spices that have been gathering dust and losing savor and start with a fresh batch even if it offends your thrifty soul to replace the old ones. Get the freshest vegetables you can buy, the speedier the transit from garden to jar the better.

"Why are my pickles never as crisp as commercial varieties," is one hardy perennial question. Several weeks bringing gives commercial pickles that crispness; you can approximate it with lime-water soaking for melon pickles, a bit of alum in the scalding liquid for other varieties.

Don't short-cut on pickle recipes. If it calls for seven days of brine it's because seven days are needed. If you have to drain off the syrup and cook down for three successive days, according to the recipe, do just that or don't bother making that kind of pickles.

"Why are my pickled onions gray and cloudy?" Blame the vinegar . . . use high grade white or pure cider vinegar for onions, cauliflower, melon, etc. Cook the mixture as little as possible, just letting it simmer.

Cucumbers that are too long from the vines or imperfect cukes will give you hollow pickles. "Does it pay to make pickles at home when the commercial varieties are so reasonable?" That depends, we'd say, on whether you grow your own ingredients or can buy them reasonably. Most women really enjoy putting up some of their own pickles and buying the rest.

Tomato Ketchup—30 pounds of tomatoes, weighed after peeling and with green spots and seeds removed, 1 1/2 cups salt, 2 1/2 to 3 cups distilled vinegar, or 4 1/2 to 6 1/3 cups white vinegar, or 6 to 8 cups cider vinegar (4 percent strength), 5 to 8 cups sugar (2 1/2 to 4 pounds), 2 tablespoons celery seed, 2 teaspoons stick cinnamon, 1 tablespoon mustard, 1 tablespoon paprika, 2 tea. spoons cayenne pepper, 4 onions if desired.

Use enamelware or agate kettle. Select sound, fresh, ripe tomatoes. Wash and remove all green or yellow spots. Plunge small quantities of tomatoes at one time into boiling water or steam them for about one minute. Slip off the skins. Force the tomatoes through a sieve and thus make 30 pounds of puree from which the seeds have been removed. Boil the puree in the enamelware kettle for 35 to 45 minutes or until the volume of the puree is reduced to about one-half. Stir the puree constantly to prevent scorching. Tie the spices loosely into a cheesecloth bag and hang the bag in the puree for 5 to 10 minutes after the puree has started to boil. Add the vinegar, sugar and salt not more than 5 minutes before the end of the cooking process. If a longer time than 45 minutes is necessary to reduce the volume to one-half, a dark-colored ketchup may be produced. If the puree foams, add a small pat of butter. If onions or garlic are used, chop them fine, tie them loosely in a bag, and keep them in the boiling puree for about 20 minutes.

Instead of boiling the puree, it may be strained through a cloth, the juice boiled down, and the pulp added afterward. This is a time-consuming process, but is advised because there is little difficulty with foaming and scorching and the ketchup is bright colored. Transfer the boiling hot ketchup to clean, sterile, hot bottles, and seal the bottles immediately.

English Mint Chutney Sauce—One-half pound ripe tomatoes, 1 pound tart apples, 2 cups granulated sugar, 3 large peppers, 12 small onions, 1/2 cup chopped mint leaves, 1 1/3 cups seeded raisins, 3 cups vinegar, 2 teaspoons dry mustard, 2 teaspoons salt.

Chop the tomatoes, add the salt and mix. Chop the apples, onions, raisins and peppers and add mint. Scald the vinegar and cook it, add the sugar and mustard. Mix all together and allow to stand at least ten days before using. Serve with lamb. This will keep indefinitely and is the better for standing several months. It may be put into preserve jars, if you wish; shake them occasionally. This relish has the advantage of not requiring any cooking and is entirely different from the usual chutney sauce.

Celery Relish—One quart celery, chopped, 1 cup white onions, chopped, 2 large green peppers, seeded and chopped, 2 cups vinegar, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon mustard 2 large red peppers, seeded and chopped.

Large coarse stalks of celery may be used in this way. Chop the celery and onions separately. Boil them separately in salted water for 10 minutes, then drain them. Mix them with the other ingredients. Boil the mixture until all the vegetables are tender. Pour the relish into clean, sterile, hot jars, and seal the jars.

Apple Pie Alaska—(from McCall's, September, 1941)—Two cups sugar, 2 cups water, 1/2 teaspoon red liquid vegetable coloring, 1 3/4 ounce package (1-3 cup) red cinnamon candies, 4 cooking apples, 9 inch baked pie shell, 3 egg whites, 9 tablespoons sugar, 1 quart firmly-frozen coffee ice cream.

Boil together 2 cups sugar, water, coloring, candies 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Pare apples, core. Poach in sirup until tender. Drain, cool, slice. Fill pie shell. Beat egg whites stiff, add remaining sugar gradually, beating constantly. Pile ice cream in center of pie, top with meringue. Brown quickly under broiler unit or burner. Serves eight.

Maine Custard Corn Cake—Two eggs, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 1/2 cups bolted corn meal, 1/2 cup Ceresota flour, 1 cup sweet milk (additional), 1 cup sour milk.

Pour the mixture into a buttered pan and into the center pour the additional cup of sweet milk. Bake in a hot oven (400 deg. F.) one-half hour.

CALL COMES TO COLLEGES

Passed by Censor

LOOKING like something out of a Buck Rogers thriller, four McGill University students, garbed in the kind of cap and gown that Nazism made necessary, get a lecture in bayonet fighting from an army instructor. For the period of the war all male students at Canadian universities must spend a definite number of hours training in the C.O.T.C. (Canadian Officers' Training Corps) during the college year. Women students are required to attend special lectures in first aid and similar subjects. As compulsory enlistment for national defense in Canada begins with the 21-year-old group, most students finish their university careers before being obliged to enter the army but many volunteers for service anyway join up before that time and large numbers of university undergraduates are serving with the Dominion's armed forces overseas and elsewhere outside Canada.

Let's have Deep-Dish Peach Pie for Dinner!

Golden-brown pastry tops luscious, fragrant filling

Feast the family tonight with a truly All-American dessert, and watch it disappear down to the last crumb!

It's no ordinary pie, this Deep-dish Peach Pie. Special tricks make it a super-special pie. First, a dash of almond to accent the luscious fragrance of peaches. Then a just-right quantity of lemon juice to add tempting tartness and brown sugar to give a nectar-like flavor of mellowness.

Top this delicious concoction with golden Spry-crust—tender, flaky and nut-sweet. The lovely golden bloom is characteristic of pastry made with milk. It's easy to make, too, with pure, all-vegetable Spry which cuts in quickly. Mends easily.

Top-notch pastry for all pies

Golden pastry-made-with-milk is grand for all pies, so use it often for your fruit pies and dainty tarts. Just use milk instead of water, and follow the easy directions in the recipe. Clip it now, and keep it handy!

DEEP-DISH PEACH PIE

10 to 12 ripe peaches, pared and sliced
1/4 cup brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup quick-cooking lemon juice
1/4 cup apricot jam
1/4 cup almond extract
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1 recipe Golden Spry-crust

Combine peaches, lemon juice, almond extract, sugar, salt and apricot jam. Mix thoroughly and let stand while making pastry. Arrange peaches in Spry-crust baking dish. Dot with butter.

Roll dough 1/4-inch thick and of a size to cover baking dish, allowing 1 inch all around. Fold in half and cut several 1/4-inch slits on fold. Place pastry over peaches in baking dish, unfold, turn edge under and press on rim all around dish. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 35 to 45 minutes.

GOLDEN SPRY-CRUST

1 1/2 cups sifted flour
1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup cold milk (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add 1/2 of Spry and cut in mixture as fine as meal. Add remaining Spry and continue cutting until particles are size of a large pea. Sprinkle milk. 1 tablespoon at a time, over mixture. With a fork, work lightly together until a dough is formed. (All measurements in recipe are level)

"Henry Morrison" Makes Port at Long Last

"This is the day." For over two years the search has continued for the elusive picture presented above. Available now through courtesy of Peabody Museum, Salem, Mass.

"Man wants but little here below, Nor wants that little long."

Goldsmith may have been right in the philosophy presented above but he didn't figure on that "little" when it takes the form of a long sought steamboat picture, and as far as the "long" goes—just let somebody try to separate the picture from its present owner.

For two drab and dubious years The Courier-Gazette's Steamboat Editor and Lawyer Frank H. Ingraham of Rockland have sought far and near for a picture of the "Henry Morrison" in her original rig, laying special emphasis on the inordinately tall stack given such admirable publicity by Will Holman of Portland.

A picture of the rebuilt "Morrison" under the name of "Bar Harbor" was located and printed in "Steamboat Days" and later a close up of the rebuilt ship was obtained from Robert Barbour of Brewer. Still later came a promise from "Lighthouse" Ed Snow of Boston of a picture of the burning wreck of the old paddler, but that has not yet become a reality.

Now comes Walter Muir Whitehill of the Peabody Museum, Salem, bearing the above coveted picture and making the day a grand success. It is the "Henry Morrison" in her original dress and proves beyond question that Bill Fifeled was right when he said "The only way they could have made her homelier was to have made her bigger."

wealthy man, he wished to erect a memorial to his parents and gave considerable time to his decision as to what form it would take. At the suggestion of his wife, he built and opened in 1897 the Grace Institute in New York in memory of his parents in order that boys and girls might obtain the advantages of education that he had been denied in his youth. He maintained the school free of all expenses for the students of which there were and still are 1500 or over attending at all times.

Upon his death in 1904 a second school was opened by his widow and children at Manhasset, Long Island, along the lines of the first, in his memory.

Mrs. Grace survived her husband by 18 years. She died in 1922, bringing to a close a beautiful and successful marital partnership which had come the long, long road from the meeting of a boy and girl, born worlds apart, to the status of a merchant prince in foreign trade. She was buried in her native township of St. George.

For some years, the children of the union sought a site for a school in their mother's memory and in 1936 opened the Lillius Gilchrist Grace Institute in Tenants Harbor with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wheeler as directors.

The domestic science department was opened in a section of a two-apartment house in which it is still housed, with Miss Christina Crockett, a graduate of Framingham Teachers College as instructor. The institute has been associated with the school system of St. George since it first opened the girls being assigned regular classes in domestic science as a part of their studies going from the school to the institute, which is close, for their classes.

A four-year course is maintained from which 40 girls have graduated to date, and 40 more are taking the course at this time. A complete classroom and kitchen are maintained where the girls receive daily instruction. Every expense is borne by the Grace family, there being no cost to the town of St. George. The full four-year course covers the selection and preparation of foods, nutrition, construction and choice of clothing interior and exterior decorating, home nursing, family relationships, care and development of the child.

In 1939 the Grace family at the suggestion of Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler appropriated additional funds to establish a manual training and metal working school for the boys of the town. Two new buildings were erected close by the original structure and the classes started under the direction of Forrest A. Wall who had had 20 years experience as carpenter and builder.

The woodworking shop is fully equipped with machinery and hand tools of every description; in short, everything that an up-to-date manual training school should have.

While this part of the institute is not connected with the school system, regular classes for boys of school age are maintained during the day. Started as a day school only, it was found that the daylight hours would not accommodate all the persons who wanted to receive the benefits of the classes, and evening sessions were started. The classes were thrown open to both boys and men in the town of St. George. Many a farmer and fisherman has learned how to do his own carpentry and metal work there in the past two years, working at the benches beside his son who was taking the course, while possibly a daughter was attending the cooking classes in the next building. Boys as young as nine years have started a course and the oldest pupil is over 90 and still going strong.

The metal arts department occupies a separate building and is equipped for blacksmith and general metal work which would be needed on the farm or in boat-building. This course is taught by Mr. Wall.

The boys and men of the town have grasped this opportunity to learn and from early Fall until late Spring, the classrooms are crowded with everyone having his own project, always something that he can use in his home or work. Again, all costs are paid by the Grace family.

Because of the desire of the Grace family to perpetuate the memory of their dead, not in cold stone, but in a living, useful memorial, the institutes were founded and will be maintained through the years by a special fund established for that purpose.

Round Top Holsteins

These Lincoln County Cows Certainly "Earned Their Salt"

Round Top Farms at Damariscotta own 22 registered Holstein cows which produced enough milk during the past test-year to provide 83 families with four quarts of milk daily for the entire year. The herd average was 4279 pounds butterfat from 11,884 pounds of milk per cow.

This butterfat average is nearly 2½ times as much as that of the country's average dairy cow, using U. S. Department of Agriculture statistics as the basis of comparison. The herd was on a 2-times-daily milking schedule.

The highest producer in the herd was Roto Matador Roxie, a 6-year old which produced 599.3 pounds butterfat from 14,552 pounds milk in 250 days.

The production records obtained by having these cows on test will be useful in planning a breeding program for the further improvement of the herd.

Testing was supervised by The Holstein-Friesian Association of America, Brattleboro, Vt., in cooperation with the University of Maine, Orono.

Approximately 15,000 registered Holsteins are being tested under the Association's Herd Improvement Registry plan.

Testing The Blood Is Now a Necessity Before Couples Can Be Married in Maine

In less than two months the State Health Bureau Laboratory, under a new Maine law effective July 26, has tested the blood of nearly 2,250 persons signifying their intentions of getting married.

The pre-marital law requires both parties contemplating marriage to show proof through blood tests—before obtaining the necessary licenses—that they have no syphilis in a communicable stage. Of the number of tests taken so far, Dr. Roscoe L. Mitchell, Bureau head, said, 19 positive blood tests were found. Asked if that meant that the persons had syphilis in a communicable stage, Dr. Mitchell replied:

"That is for the doctor who examined the persons to decide."

The law requires both man and woman applicants to produce physicians' certificates before getting marriage licenses, the tests must have been done within 30 days prior to the application for licenses. Marriage intentions, however, may be filed anytime.

The largest single day's tests totaled 150 and the smallest 44, said Dr. Mitchell who added there had been very little criticism of the law.

"There have been quite a few former Maine residents who have come back to the State to get married and had to submit to the blood tests," he said, "while several Summer visitors, who wanted to be married in Maine, also have taken the tests."

Approximately 8000 marriages are recorded annually in Maine. Dr. Mitchell therefore expected the blood tests would total about 16,000 a year. He estimated the administration cost would be between $2500 and $3000 annually.

Seafarers' Guides

A Story Of New England Lighthouses As Told By Fred C. Green Of Boston

The group of lights encountered as we sail from Gloucester toward Boston are reminiscent of the great days of America's merchant marine when ships sailed from Salem to China and other far countries; when the old mercantile buildings and counting rooms along the waterfront where Nathaniel Hawthorne was once employed in the Custom House, and when the stately old mansions of the town had their captain's walks from where watch was kept for the vessels due.

First comes the station on Baker's Island, which is at the southern side of the main ship channel entrance to Salem Harbor. Although, in accordance with the Federal Government's economy move of abolishing all twin lights in this area, the southerly tower has been razed, the old record from which these observations are made described two towers, each white with a black lantern, the southerly edifice conical and the other an octagonal pyramid, connected with dwellings by covered ways; a white bell tower and a fog signal house of red brick 60 feet northerly of the southward tower, a white brick oil house 325 feet and another oil house of gray stone 335 feet westerly from the north tower. A compressed air siren was used as a fog warning. The towers were first lighted in 1798 and rebuilt in 1821. The tower that remains has a lantern height of 11 feet from which a fixed white light can be seen for 16½ miles. The other tower's lantern was 91½ feet above high water and its light, also fixed white, had a visibility of 15½ miles. The towers were 40 feet apart.

The lighthouse on Hospital Point is at the westerly side of Beverly Cove, which is an offshoot of Salem Harbor, and is at the northerly side of the main entrance. It was established in 1871 and never rebuilt. A pyramidal white tower with black lantern, dwelling and outhouses, a white oil house 103 feet easterly make up the plant, which shows a fixed white light visible 13½ miles from a height of 66½ feet. This light is more brilliant in the center line of the main ship channel between Baker's Island and Little Misery Island than on either side, according to the record.

Altogether different is the present set-up of Hospital Point, for it is now a range light, with the old beacon showing a fixed red light. The rear beacon of the range is in the steeple of the First Baptist Church, 2050 yards from the front light and 183 feet above high water, from where it shows a fixed white beam. Fort Pickering light, also established in 1871, is on the southeasterly point of Winter Island, at the westerly side of Salem Harbor. It consists of a brown conical tower with a white base and a black lantern, with a white bridge from tower to shore. The light is fixed white and can be seen 10½ miles from a lantern height of 28½ feet.

Derby Wharf, at which the old Salem ships used to tie up to discharge their teas and spices, has a red, square tower at its outer end which was first lighted in 1871.

The lantern is 25 feet above mean high water and the fixed red light can be seen 7½ miles. When Fort Pickering light is kept in range with that on Derby Wharf the course clears Haste Shoal. Both Fort Pickering and Derby Wharf lights are now in the unattended class.

Marblehead light, which has looked down on more yachts than any other beacon in the world, stands at the northerly point of Marblehead Neck at the southerly side of the entrance to Marblehead Harbor. It is a square, pyramidal skeleton iron tower with a central stair cylinder; brown from foundation to gallery floor, black above; a white covered way, 150 feet in length, connects with the dwelling which is white as is the oil house, standing 189 feet southwesterly from the tower. First lighted in 1836 and rebuilt in 1896, its fixed white light, which now is fixed green, could be seen 11½ miles from a lantern height of 130 feet.

Egg Rock light, which was razed several years ago, stood on Egg Rock about ¾ of a mile off Nahant Head and about two miles to the southward of the Swampscott shore. It served as a guide to the Swampscott anchorage and to warn coasters to keep off. I recall a Winter northeast several years ago when one of the fast-dwindling schooner fleet got caught inside Egg Rock when seeking shelter, stranded at Swampscott and strewn the beaches with her deckload of lathes.

The station included a black lantern and square gallery on a square, pyramidal tower of white brick attached to a white wooden dwelling, with a second dwelling 270 feet westerly of the first house. A gray framework landing and a white boathouse stood at the westerly side of the island. The light was established in 1856 and rebuilt in 1898. Its beam was fixed red and from 90 feet above high water it was visible 8½ miles.

We have skirted the shore of the Nahant headland by now and are standing in to Lynn Harbor, which has a tricky channel. The fixed white and fixed red lens lanterns set on a black spindle surmounting a black pile dolphin marking White Rocks comprise the first beacon encountered. They set at the westerly side of the main channel, and were established in 1897. Black Rocks, further in and also at the westerly edge of the channel, are marked by a fixed red post lantern as are Sandy Point and Black Marsh Channel, all on the westerly side and each comprising a spindle and dolphin arrangement. Upper Turn, at the easterly edge of the dredged channel, was given a fixed white post lantern, also of the spindle and dolphin setup. All these markers were set in place in 1897.

All human beings make mistakes, which is one of the reasons why erasers are put on lead pencils. In a recent installment of the light-house series I was quoted as saying that the Salisbury Beach range lights have been discontinued. That requires correction, as they are still on the active list. It may have been that I had in mind the lights off the neighboring town of Ipswich but whatever the reason, I was in error.
